February 13, 2016

The Jordanian House of Representatives convened two legislative sessions and one oversight session during the third ordinary session of the 13th week. 13 of the Parliamentary committees held 19 meetings during the past week, and 7 committees did not convene any meetings during this time.

The past week witnessed two major events. The loss of the quorum occurred in two council sessions – the legislative session held on Sunday, and the oversight session held on Tuesday. In this case, the council meeting violated the Constitutional provisions regarding the legal quorum for each session.

Sunday's legislative session adjourned after approximately one hour because of the loss of the quorum. The head of the council overlooked the loss of quorum in the oversight session on Tuesday, which continued until attendance reached 16 MP's as reported in the press and by the RASED team.

MPs Mahmoud Al-Kharabsheh and Amjad Al-Majali questioned the constitutionality of holding the legislative session, noting that the session was held without a quorum. The presidency of the Council denied this allegation, and confirmed the availability of a quorum at the beginning of the session.

The existence of violation of the provisions of the Constitution in Article 84 was clear in the Council's oversight session. The article states that, «the chambers' sessions are not considered legal unless attended by an absolute majority of the Board members and continue to be valid as long as the majority is present.»
